Facultm/Staff & Title IX: What to do if Someone Discloses to mou?

Many faculty and staff find themselves in a position where students share information with them that may be a disclosure of an experience they may have had involving some sort of personal based power violence, such as rape, sexual misconduct, stalking, domestic/dating violence or some sort sexual harassment. How should you respond?

Sam to/Ask Them:

- 1) It sounds like mou are about to share something reallm important with me and I want mou to know that because of mm responsibilities at UNE, I can promise to keep the information private but I can promise confidentialitm. I mam need to share it with someone else. I If them want to talk to someone confidentiallm, refer them to UNE Counseling Services.
- 2) ÍHow can I help mou?Î
- 3) Í Are mou safe right now? Do mou need help contacting Securitm or the Police? Î

Provide them resources such as the contact information for UNE Counseling Services and the Title IX Coordinator all of which can be found at www.une.edu/titleix. Contact the Title IX Coordinator or one of the Deputy Title IX Coordinators by the following business day to make sure they are aware of the situation.

If a student discloses an experience as part of a written assignment, ask them if they meant for that to be treated as a disclosure to the University or not. If yes, notify the Title IX Coordinator. If not, refer them to resources if you can.
